

It starts earlier than you might think.

The parts of the brain that help children learn to read develop from birth to age 3, and they grow every time we share books together.

